PORCINI

Tonight and the next few nights

It's been a good week here at Oliveto.

This morning, Romano Isole, came in with our first local porcini of the season. They're so beautiful we bought all he had-45 lbs. He gathered them near Jackson, in the Sierra foothills east of Sacramento.

We'll have some tonight and over the next few days. Paul is going through them now, figuring out what he wants to do with them all. He thinks he'll probably have them shaved or sautéed and put over semolina taliatelle, maybe there'll be a tasty porcini cannelloni. And, perhaps he'll conserve some of them for our New Year's Eve dinners.

I just wanted to include this picture of some large (4 lbs.) octopi from Florida that came in yesterday morning.

They're on the menu the next few nights as:
Chilled octopus with Olivestri new olive oil, capers, celery,
and lemon $13.50
